1. The Supply Division emphasis during 1982 was keyed to a significant increase in paramilitary and covert action support to the Directorate of Operations. The rehabilitation and upgrade of [REDACTED] facilities represented a major effort which began in 1981 and will continue into 1983.

2. This support was a consolidated Supply Division effort with particular emphasis placed on responsiveness to operational requirements and building a cadre of highly skilled personnel to perform frequent and prolonged TDY assignments. [REDACTED]

3. [REDACTED] new recruits and [REDACTED] internal employees were selected for the Supply Officer Trainee Program. This is a formal training program developed to ensure that a ready cadre of trained personnel are available to meet projected requirements for management positions of the future. The Ordnance Technician Program was developed to rebuild skills lost through retirements and reassignments of ordnance specialists. [REDACTED] candidates completed [REDACTED] quality assurance training in 1982. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] The promotion rate for Supply Division personnel during the year was a respectable fifty-seven percent.

5. The Supply Division provided the TDY assistance of [] personnel totalling [] man-hours in support of Agency components. These services were performed in the CONUS and overseas in support of special projects; inventory teams, inspection and receipt of ordnance materiel; instructing and assisting in training courses; packing Government-owned equipment for shipment from contractor's plants; and developing new capabilities to support covert action programs.

6. In summary, this has been an extremely active year for the Supply Division which has revitalized the "can do" spirit. The return to support of covert action programs identified a number of problems and shortcomings which had to be overcome. Supply Division personnel met the challenge and maintained a high degree of productivity. This effort resulted in a more cohesive, stronger team in the Division to meet customer requirements on a timely and effective basis.
